naming rules

Which name you use is of course your choice. But please notice following restrictions:

- The names must be acknowledged by the registry office as acceptable given first names but double names are not accepted. Furthermore the names have to be written without any special characters other than German umlauts.
- Surnames or names of companies are not accepted unless there are first names as well.
- The gender has to be regarded. In even years Lows are named with female names and Highs with male names. In odd years it is just the opposite.

If there are any questions about a name or the possibility of a name just contact us and we will check and if needed find a solution.

Additional Information

It is common praxis but we do not guarantee that media use these names for Highs and Lows in their weather reports and programme. Nobody is obliged to inherit the names.

We can not specify at which point in time a High or Low will be named. This is at the discretion of the meteorologist on duty. Furthermore he marks the High or Low which will be named. Generally pressure areas get names when they reach importance for weather pattern in Central Europe.

We publish the name of the orderer (or if desired the name of the godparent) at our homepage. The declaration of a website is optional. At this we also reserve the right to link the given homepage or not. In general the links stay active for two years and will be removed after this time. Please notice that we link natural persons, only! If you want a juristic person please understand that this is just possible as appendix. In this case a natural person could be the orderer for example.

Please understand that we reserve the right to link the same homepage for several adoptions just once a year. Furthermore there are no sentences or parts of sentences for the linking text allowed, only the website is named. Each linking to a homepage is at a price of €20,-.

For example: Max Mustermann (www.wetterpate.de)
